

You are cordially invited to the opening of a new exhibit:

They Changed the World

The People of Project Y at Los Alamos, 1943–1945

Important to the success of Project Y were not only scientists and engineers but also those who were less visible, serving in roles as diverse as technicians, housekeepers, and schoolteachers. The Museum's new exhibit salutes these people whose efforts helped change the world.

TRINITY TEST, JULY 16, 1945

Monday, July 16, 2007

4:30–6:30 PM

Bradbury Science Museum

15th & Central, Los Alamos

LIGHT REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED.

On display will be the photography of AJ Melnick. Her striking collection of sixty-one portraits, taken over a recent two-year period, represents the hundreds of people who worked on Project Y.

Honored guests at the opening reception will be several of Melnick's subjects.

NOTE:

AJ Melnick and our honored guests will be available to sign copies of Melnick's book, They Changed the World: People of the Manhattan Project (Sunstone Press, 2006).
